BETTER TIMES ARE PREDICTED

Cotton Advances to Eight Cents While the Weakening of One Side in the European Conflict, Causes Optimism.

With cotton having advanced to eight cents per pound good middling, and a prevailing spirit of co-operation throughout the South and entire country to assist the Southern planter in coping successfully with the present conditions, comes a suggestion of better times

The casual observer can see that conditions have improved within the past few weeks and that indications are that each day will witness an increasing change from pessimism to optimism

The several plans advanced for caring for emergency cotton have been adopted throughout the cotton belt to some extent, most every community showing a willingness to help in the good cause

The merchants of Union Springs have organized to offer their assistance, as have the merchants in other towns and cities of the cotton growing states

When it is clearly demonstrated that the cotton crop will not be forced upon the market at sacrifice prices, the staple will advance, possibly not rapidly, but steadily, it is believed

The news each day that one side weakens in the titanic conflict in Europe, is bound to have a desirable effect upon the cotton situation Many believe that the victors in the monster war will be decided within three or four weeks, although there may be fighting after this period

At the beginning of the war, there were military experts who predicted that the struggle would last for over a year, but this opinion is not universally entertained now The developments of the past few weeks have indicated that with the millions of men and money involved that an end must be reached soon

The courage of the Southern farmer in holding his cotton for better prices, has been the admiration of all sympathizers In this plan the farmer has been assisted ably by the merchants The farmer, as well as the commercial world, anxiously awaits the opening of the cotton exchange, which event will mean so much to the South

MAYOR BAKER COMES TO AID OF WEARERS OF STRAW LIDS

The wind sweeps down from the East The air is full of Autumn with its browning leaves Yesterday was September 15 There should have been ere that day or upon said occasion a complete eviction of straw hats, but the lids are still in our midst

The story is a sad one Three minutes recess for a lesson in sweeping lead by three The sally lasts have inundated the typewriter Wind that swoops down upon the crest and heartless streets, has filled our eyes with little grains of sand But back of it all—and here's the black plot in this tragedy—is an old straw hat that ought to have gone long ago but it can't depart

First came the boll weevil from the Mississippi levees or thereabouts in small numbers His approach was heralded with great despair and bitterness All felt for the poor farmer for the people always have the interest of the farmer at heart There is nothing more manifest than this tender solicitude

But somehow the boll weevil fright didn't serve to stop the tango or put all the cloth shops and butcher pens out of existence Folks continued to eat three meals a day—in the South—and breathe and sleep right on

Then one morning late sleepers, upon arising made the harrowing discovery that a titanic European conflict was raging somewhere between or beyond Midland City and Grimes The tragedy was confirmed

But here is the saddest part of the tale the cotton exchange closed and before a speculator could have his fine polished cotton had flopped down to seven cents The flop was hard to hear, and there was much discomfiture in the land, except among cotton mills and cotton oil mills.

Now with all these troubles, why should young men be compelled to lay aside their sombreros September 15 just because some goop has said it ought to be done?

No sir In view of these conditions Mayor Joe Baker has issued an edict saying that all men will be perfectly safe upon the streets with their straw lids until the first day of next month. The mayor is taking this position because he realizes the vast possibilities at stake

So be not afraid to venture forth upon the paved sidewalks with your straw lids. Wear them any way, flip-flopped, zig-zagged, sidewise, tilted, one side, both sides, all sides. It is even legal and no group violation of the statutes, to wear them college style. The Mayor has instructed the police to put up with all kinds of straws, barring those that are intoxicated. The slightly stewed kind may get by the police The chorus girl crump style, which is so popular in Dothan, will be permitted.

This town is a hot bed of democracy—is Dothan It is everywhere visible to the eye, aye, even perceptible to the untrained eye. Feast in it, regale in it, and wear that old straw lid 'till the crown falls out if you want to, for unless a policeman hits you, there won't be any stars in your crown, anyway, by heck!

AMERICAN FORCES TO EVACUATE VERA CRUZ OCT. 1ST.

Washington, Sept 16.—Secretary of War Garrison announced that the American forces would evacuate Vera Cruz October 1st. The fleet will probably be withdrawn the same time but patrol along the Rio Grande will be maintained.

Americans will have occupied Vera Cruz five months at a cost of about three million dollars

NEWTON BACK IN TOILS AGAIN

The prairies and cotton fields stretched out before him, and the past was buried in Alabama, but there was something that impelled Lorrence Newton(former Free Will Baptist preacher, to come back to his native heath

Lorrence Newton was arrested about eight miles south of Dothan last night by Deputies Henry Nicols and John Hilson, and the man is back in the county jail with his thoughts

The story of Newton is tragic He was arrested last Fall on statuatory charges in which his own daughter was involved and locked in the county jail The shock must have been great on his mind for he was tried and committed to the Asylum at Tuscaloosa, from whence he escaped

"It was God's will for me to come back and stand trial," is what the deputies quote the man as saying

He told the officers of his escape One night, according to his story, he shook a window at the institution and the bolts dropped out but he replaced them and waited about two weeks before making a successful get-away He went to Texas, but something called him back to Alabama

Newton says according to the officers that he had a vision of his daughter, who said to him "I thought you said you was not afraid of those folks, but I notice you are going the other way." Following this, he said he determined to return.

YOUR COTTON SEED.

When a man asks you to sell your cotton seed at the present prices, ask him if he benefits by it. If it is shown that he knows more about what they are writh than you know, and that he has no interests in the profits, you can take his advice, if you haven't a good dose of liver medicine to take. The oil mills have failed to show yet any necessity of running the price of seed down to the present selling price. They have been busy trying to get together on a price to pay for seed, and they have fixed a price that looks like it ought to buy the seed of this country. Just because the farmer is tied, hog fashion, on the price of his cotton is no reason why he should let the other man name the price on the seed. They are worth too much for fertilizer.

FAIR ADVERTISING.

Just a few dollars judiciously spent with some of the newspapers in this territory advertising the fair association of Dothan would be a good investment, and it is high time the publicity committee of the fair was doing something along this line.

The Dothan papers are accustomed to blowing home ventures without hope of fee or reward, but the papers outside of Dothan are not supposed to jump into the proposition with any great glee unless they have been given some advertising.

The advertising for the fairs at Montgomery and Birmingham has been in the papers for some weeks.

This being the first year Dothan has tried her hand at a fair, it should be made a good one.

This world is a mighty small thing when trouble comes up like ours. Think of the European war, among people we had never thought much of one way or another, knocking the bottom out of business as this one has. We fought four years in our own country fifty years ago, and the south was impoverished, but we never thought a foreign war could effect us as the present one has. There is something wrong with the trade arrangements. We should now be able to make a correct diagnosis and treat it intelligently.

Every farmer in this county can raise from a dozen to two hundred head of hogs, and that without very little increased expense. They are a good price and will bring ready money any day of the year, and the European war, the Mexican war, or the boll weevil war, will have no effect on the man with a pasture full of hogs ready for the market. Five sixths out of them [illegible] with hog

WILL THERE BE AN INDEPENDENT CANDIDATE FOR SHERIFF?

It keeps coming to us that there is to be an independent candidate for sheriff. At first, we thought it idle rumor, but there are those who insist that as soon as the Dothan mayor's race is over with Monday, that his friends will put out a candidate against John May, realizing that May's election as sheriff will give the whiskey business in this county a black eye, matters not who runs the town.

It don't look reasonable that one could find enough democrats who pledged themselves to abide the decision of the primary, to now give any considerable strength to an independent candidate for any office.

There isn't a shadow of an excuse for an independent candidate making the race. If there is one, you can understand from the start, that Jacksonville and Pensacola money will be placed behind him to make our laws ineffective.

If the people of this country are asinid to sit calmly by and allow the wholesale whiskey houses to debauch our elections they have no one to blame but themselves.

When the Monday's election is over, and there being no chance to start anything in the municipal campaign, it will be seen if there is anything to rumor of an independent. Truly, we hope there is nothing to it. We have had so much politics already.

NEVER AGAIN

Never again will we speak lightly of Old Hawbuck Rose, and Montgomery Ward, whose thousand page catalogues adorn the mantle pieces of ten thousand homes throughout the cotton belt.

The International Harvester Co., which sells farm machinery to the farmers, might be expected to buy 10,000 bales of cotton to help the buy-a-bale movement, but who would have expected Montgomery Ward & Co., and Sears Roebuck & Co., to buy 10,000 bales each?

They deserve a rising vote of thanks.

Who will be the next?

How about Mr. Henry Ford?

Couldn't he be induced to exchange his cash receipts for one month for 10c cotton?

And while we are about it, there are several other automobile manufacturers, who have helped to put this country on the blink for ready cash, that might invest a few dollars in cotton to stop the flow during the present prices.

STOP KILLING SQUIRRELS.

Many hunters are killing squirrels now in violation of the state game law. The season for shooting squirrels does not open until October first and all sportsmen and others interested in game conservation should see that the law is enforced.

The mother squirrels are raising their young during this month and if they are killed many of the young will starve to death.

There ought not to be any one who is not willing to observe the law, as its intent is to increase the number of squirrels.

Don't kill squirrels now yourself and see that the other fellow does not until the season opens.

When you take a notion to sell your cotton seed let it be after you have found out that fertilizer is going to be cheaper next spring instead of higher.

The American Bell Telephone Co., suspecting wire trouble, has sent a man to the South American country, to get in closer relations with your neighbors.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

Commercial Appeal.

When a few days ago David Lloyd-George made the public statement that he thought "the last few hundred millions may win the war," he gave to the public of the world something to think about.

The last few hundred millions mean a great deal. The country that has been prudent and has during times of peace put aside an emergency fund is fortunate.

The few hundred millions may win the fight. It is fortunate that there are a few hundred millions left. The nation which exhausts its war fund is in a precarious condition. The money markets tighten in times of war and the individual capitalist becomes ultra conservative when loans are to be negotiated.

If it is wise for nations, in times of peace, to prepare for the future, so it is wise for the head of the family, in times of prosperity, to save for the day when the sky may become clouded, when sickness and death may visit the household, when the days may not be prosperous days.

The man who thinks of the tomorrows and prepares to meet them will never confront actual want. He will be prepared for the emergency when it arrives. The man who does not do this, who lives up to his means, who never saves, who is confident that he is immune from trouble, will find out his mistake when it is too late.

President Wilson, like Lloyd-George, evidently feels that should this country ever become involved in war the last few hundred millions will win the day. He believes that the United States should have an adequate reserve fund to be used in the case of emergency. This is why he advocates a war tax.

It is a thrift which counts, thrift and the practice of economy. The United States is neither at war nor threatened with war, and it is the prayer of the people that we may never become involved in war again. Our present sky is unclouded. We are friends with the world. Yet the admonition concealed in the prophecy of the British chancellor may well be heeded on this side of the Atlantic. It is no time for the government—national, state or local—to waste resources. This is true at any time, regardless of war. Governments require money at all times, in times of peace as well as in times of war. No one can say what may happen. No one knows when this need of money may become acute. The public of the world, now that war has disrupted the world's commerce and industry, sees the wisdom of being prepared for any emergency.

Let the prophetic suggestion of Lloyd-George apply to the individual not in millions but within his means. Let him, when the time of sickness or trouble comes, say to himself the last few dollars I have saved may keep me from immediate disaster.

WHAT IT MEANS TO BE A GENTLEMAN

(Dallas Times Herald.)

What does it mean to be a gentleman? Speaking to the Pastor's Association the other day Prof. J. F. Kimball, superintendent of the Dallas public schools, said that the schools are working up a course of study of the private lives of great men and women.

"No boy could read the inside life of Robert E. Lee and his private, personal correspondence without coming to a higher conception of what it means to be a gentleman," said Professor Kimball.

General Lee knew what it is to be a gentleman. How splendidly his name shines from the pages of history! The man whose military genius made the world gasp with admiration. The hero who left the battlefield to lead Southern youths through the fields of knowledge.

Some of us have a habit of looking at the picture of Southern gentlemen of the old regime with a sort of tolerant affection. A fine man for his day but not for our days of ceaseless activity.

Don Quixote he would be among us now we self-importantly say.

And yet with this passing away of the courteous cavalier of the South has there not vanished something of so fine a flavor that all the piquant sauce of this present day life cannot replace it?

Most of us are courteous these days for "business reasons" only.

In General Lee's time men of his type were courteous and kind-hearted because courtesy and kind-heartedness were parts of their life's creed.

We seldom catch a glimpse of these qualities now. The other day we caught one. It was when an aged day laborer, trembling from weakness, gave his seat in a street car to a lady.

No, she didn't thank him. Perhaps that has something to do with the passing of the exquisite quality of politeness.

ECHOES FROM THE WAR

Doolittle sat in a big arm chair, before a warm fire with one of his favorite brand cigars in his mouth and a copy of The Dothan Eagle in his hands so as to completely hide his face. In one corner of the same room, sat Mrs. Doolittle with an immense wad of chewing gum in her mouth. She was reading no paper but was vigorously working her jaws in an effort to get the sweetness from her gum. The "ca-swish" of the gum got on Mr. Doolittle's nerves and he politely asked Mirandy to cease. The smoke from Mr. Doolittle's cigar was sickening to Mrs. Doolittle, so she replied: "I'll make a trade with you. If you will stop smoking those horrid cigars, I will promise to refrain from chewing gum."

"Agreed!" exclaimed Mr. Doolittle. "I will hide this 'stub' in the garret."

"And I will hide my gum there, pisen!" cried Mrs. Doolittle.

So the bargain was settled and all went well for several hours. Mrs. Doolittle was in the kitchen when she thought how bad she wanted her gum and how easy it would be to slip up into the garret and secure it without "hubby" knowing anything about it. Mr. Doolittle was in the garden when the same thought struck him. Why couldn't he secure his cigar without wifey's knowledge? He would try, at any rate.

About five minutes later, a scream from Mrs. Doolittle attracted the neighbors' attention. Mrs. Sniggles was sure that she yelled "Murder" so she 'phoned for the police. Old Aunt Jennie Shingles was certain that she yelled "Fire," so she 'proned for the fire department. The two forces arrived almost at the same time. They were ushered to the garret by Mrs. Doolittle. Several minutes later the combined forces drew the shamefaced Mr. Doolittle from his hiding place. The men would allow no explanation so Doolittle was carried to jail. Shortly afterwards he was released on bond and went home with the intention of giving his wife a piece of his mind.

"Mirandy! Will you please explain your conduct of this evening?"

"Sir, I have nothing to explain."

"Why were you in the garret?" asked Mr. Doolittle.

"I went for my gum," answered Mrs. Doolittle. "And why were you there?"

"Er—er—I went for my cigar," he answered.

"Well, shall we call it quits or shall I prosecute you?"

"I think we had better call it quits," answered Mr. Doolittle, as he went head-foremost into wifey's arms.
